Since 1902

The Times Literary Supplement

has been the world's most distinguished literary review, but from 1897-1902

Literature was pre-eminent

If your library has back issues of The Times Literary Supplement, you can enrich your collection with reprinted volumes of Literature 1897-1902, the illustrious predecessor to The Times Literary Supplement.

No literary reference collection is complete without Literature 1897-1902, because for the five years preceding the first issue of The Times Literary Supplement, Literature, illuminated English and world literature and established itself as an incomparable literary forum.

The most prominent writers and reviewers of their time contributed to Literature, including H. G. Wells, Henry James, Joseph Conrad, Rudyard Kipling, Winston Spencer Churchill, Hilaire Belloc, Lady Gregory, W. B. Yeats and Sidney and Beatrice Webb.

Now available in sturdily bound volumes, printed on acid-free paper, Literature 1897-1902 adds a treasure trove of information to your current reference works.

9 volumes all indexed by author, title, genre and subject, 5,440 pages plus supplements.

PRICE: $500 complete set (9 volumes). $65 individual volumes.

"... it is fascinating to read about the inception and reception of works that are not yet defunct. More practically, the set can be recommended as valuable material making up a not unimportant strand of social and intellectual history. More practically still, the volumes can be a rich mine for the new generation of thesis-subject hunters. And to any kind of reader who may have the good fortune to be able to browse in them in some library they will give a whale of a time."
